++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Very cold with further snow showers, mainly in east.

Today:
Another cold day but less windy for many, particularly in the north. Western parts seeing most shelter with some good sunny spells. Eastern areas and the Northern Isles continuing to see snow showers.

Tonight:
Snow showers continuing for the far southeast and the Northern Isles throughout but dying out elsewhere in the east. Very cold with easing winds for most.

Thursday:
Scattered snow showers in the far northeast, isolated snow showers at first far south. Otherwise dry but cold. Cloudier in the southwest with some light sleet and snow possible later.

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
Mostly dry and very cold on Friday. Through the weekend outbreaks of rain and snow will slowly move eastwards as it slowly turns less cold. Becoming increasingly windy.
